ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

Enroll in UPPP 117
Environmental Justice
WINTER 2021

Why are some communities more burdened with environmental hazards than others? Through readings, lectures, discussions, and case studies, students in this course will examine the history of the environmental justice (EJ) movement, the role of policy in EJ, EJ's associated health issues, and how communities respond to injustice. Students will acquire a broad perspective of EJ frameworks, but also focus on specific EJ topics (i.e. park equity, air quality, water quality, housing, & eco-gentrification).
